The AUDITORIUM.

Streng Bill for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Monday merning will bring to the auditorium four first class vaudeville and most impossible to detect.

The Care Pack

Monday merning will bring to the Auditorium four first class vaudeville acts, with two of them "trios." There will be so much special scenery and electrical effects carried by these two acts that its will be necessary to discard nearly all of the regular theator scenery for the first half of the week. Wood's Musical Trio of accomplished players will appear in a very rich and appropriate setting wearing beautiful costumes, and playing many different musical instruments with a skill and technique which is seldom seen on a vaudeville stage. The pony drummer, has bedith Wood, who has been making such a lift throughout the country, will be introduced in this act and will no death uphold her former record. The second "three act" will be presented by hir. Burt S. Frank, who this year is handhing a comedy-drama, Before the Play. The scene is laid in the dreasing room of a "typical one might stand" theater; time, the presents and plot is on the same order as that which Rose Stahl works on in the new famous The Chorus Lady. All three performers are clever artists. Mise Mae Melville, singing comedication, and Will F. Harbert, dancer, will complete the diggest and best bill thus far this sesson. The motion picture machines am getting in better running order every day and the pletures more interesting.

DENTISTS IN SCHOOLS. ults of Exemination of Teeth of Pupils in Waterbury.

No better argument for dental in-spection of Waterbury schools could be presented than the result of the in-spection of the Croft school, says the Waterbury Republican. The Croft school was the first to be investigated, the conditions were surprising, about two per cent. of the pupils found to here perfect teeth and mouths of the 913 children exned, 4,454 decayed teeth were no-

The need of a thorough dental examination of schools has been advocated by dental societies all over the country but it was only last spring that the Waterbury board of education considered the matter seriously. So impressed were the commissioners with the case as presented by representatives of the Waterbury Dental society that they appropriated $300 for the work.

The society, which has about twenmediately. Supplies were ordered and in a short time the examination and in a short time the examination was begun in the Croft school. Twenty-five dentists agreed to give up a half day every two weeks to ascertain the conditions in the local schools. The examining dentists receive no compensation for their work and do no operating in the schools.

At the Croft school, the dentists examined each child's mouth carefully, noting each defect. These defects were marked on small charts, one copy of this was sent to the parents, another to the board of education and the society kept the other. and the society kept the other. examinations always included t lectures on the care of the teeth the close relation between the Contrary to the general belief, the children of foreign parents were found to have good, sound teeth. This was not due so much to the care taken of them as the kind of food generally eaten by immigrants, before they become accustomed to the softer American foods, which acted as natural cleansers and preservatives of the teeth.

After completing the work at the Croft school the examining dentists than began the same kind of work at the Duggan school Considerable progress was made before the close of the school year. The work will be conued with the opening of the next school year.

Beauty of Old Age.

Beauty of Old Age.

As a rule people mellow with age. As experience ripens into knowledge antimosities should fade into charity and love and wisdom deepen. It is often impossible to ward off infirmity, but neither age nor infirmity need mean decreptitude and age need not mean unhappeness. Nor should age narrow a person. It should distinctly broaden and deepen a man or a woman. What is more delightful than the grandmother in the home who can cheer and help by her seasoned experience and her glowing affection? She has been all along the highway of life and knows its pitfalls and temptations. Her last years should be her best for the opportunity they offer of helping others to walk where she walked better than she did.

Remiriscence is a concomitant of age, but it is no warrant for that narrow fallacy that the "good old times" were the best and the old person who can get away from this delusion can be happier with less effort than the one who lives entirely in the vesterday of life. How designtful it is to see an old person who keeps up with the times, reads the papers and new books and converses on the questions of the day, and how much more respect age like this commands than that that iles down to die just because the evening of tire has come. What is there in dearh that such a life can covet?—Omaha Bee.

Extravagant Economy.

In often consists in doing consthing you want now in our something you don't want to be a final formal formal.

DISHONEST WEIGHT.

Cheat Many Buyers. Cheat Many Buyers.

That New Haven has been fleeced daily and to no small degree, is clearly shown by the outcome of Sealer of Weights and Measures Edward J. Maroney's trips to Commerce street, early mornings for the past few days. He went for the purpose of inspecting the outfits used by New Haven's swarm of hucksters by making their sales.

Nearly two dozen confiscated measures told the story. Means, both crude and otherwise, were found by which the dealers in fruits and vegetables.

and otherwise were found by which the dealers in fruits and vegetables cheated the unsuspecting housewife. The most glaring of these violations was taken by Mr. Maroney to his office in the city hall, where they will remain until called upon to be used again the next time as a help to measure justice. The sealer is undecided as to the way he shall proceed and is greatly handicapped by the present ordinances governing his actions in such in which she has been engaged dinances governing his actions in such matters. He admits that arrests should be made in some cases and it is possi-ble that he will appeal to the city attorney for warrants in a short time. The first day he found three two-quart measures and two peck measures not giving the proper amount. The next morning on visiting other hucksters he found more measures that he confiscated. In some instances

A whole lot has been said about the people and things that "can't come back." It's time that just a little reognition be given to those who de ome back.

For instance, there is:
Fells Domestica (cat). The tax collector. The campaign cigar.
The poor relatives from the country.
The lawn mower.
The ancient vaudeville joke.
The sixty-first congress.
Your mether-in-law.
